

Highways to the Future

The US$ 25 billion National Highways Development Programme, launched in 1999 is India's largest infrastructure project, and aims to upgrade and modernize over 14000 kilometres of highways.

The hub and spoke network that the NHDP and associated programmes will create, aims to give a huge fillip to economic activity in the hinterland.

A large number of projects in this sector are being executed under Public-Private Partnership Agreements and have participation by major foreign players.

To know more about India, log on to www.ibef.org